Eerie Fire Balls Pace German Planes in West

NIGHT FIGHTER BASE, FRANCE. — American fighter pilots engaged in flying night Intruder missions over Germany report the Nazis have come up with a new "secret weapon." They are mysterious "balls of fire" that race along beside their planes for miles like will-o'-the-wisps.

Yank pilots have dubbed them "foo fighters" and at first thought they might explode, but so far there is no indication that any planes have been damaged by them.

Some pilots have expressed belief that the "foo fighter" was designed strictly as a psychological weapon. Intelligence reports seem to indicate it is radio-controlled from the ground and can keep pace with planes flying 300 miles an hour.

Lieut. Donald Meiers of Chicago said there are three types of "foo fighters"—red balls of fire that fly along at wing tip, a vertical row of three balls of fire that fly in front of the planes and a group of about 15 lights that follow the plane at a distance, flickering on and off.

Nurses Are Calm During Heavy Buzz-Bomb Attacks

SOMEWHERE IN BELGIUM. — Army nurses are weathering the heaviest buzz-bomb attacks of the war with a calmness that causes soldiers to think twice before ducking every time they hear a V-1.

Dozens of bombs are falling in some areas day and night, yet the nurses go about their duties as though they were working in a hospital back home.

Powdered Metal Is Aid in War Effort

Speeds Up Manufacture of Delicate Instruments.

DETROIT. — Too many Americans believe that the most important scientific research and enterprise has been developed in foreign countries, according to A. J. Langhammer, president of the Amplex division of Chrysler corporation.

"It's time to advise the American public that scientific research here equals or surpasses that of any other nation," Langhammer said, "and it is part of industry's job to prove it."

Langhammer, who directs powdered metal and research production for Chrysler, charged that foreign developments frequently have been more spectacular because so often concentrated on devices to kill, such as Germany's robot plane.

"In this country we have designed for peace, but when faced with war our scientists and research men have met the challenge. And we had the know-how to build mass production machinery to finish the job, and build the greatest war machine in world history," Langhammer said.

The Amplex chief pointed to advances in powdered metallurgy as one of research's most important contributions to war production, making possible mass production of intricate parts at incalculable savings in time, labor and strategic materials.

"Record after record was broken in getting under way fast," Langhammer said. 'Powdered metallurgy made possible immediate manufacture of scientific equipment and apparatus otherwise unobtainable."

Though use of powdered metal was known to the ancients, Langhammer said Amplex was among pioneers to use it in making oil impregnated bearings and parts which may last the life of a plane, tank or gun without needing lubrication.

"From Oilite bearings to precision instruments and iron parts that are hard as tool steel—through newer developments that are still military secrets — was a logical, though not a simple step," Langhammer said.

Sun Ray Shield

Scientists claim the earth's atmosphere shields its inhabitants from harmful sun rays and helps to equalize day and night temperatures.

Cures Sleeplessness

Sleeplessness in 11 out of 12 cases was cured by Dr. Michael M. Miller of the United States marine hospital at Ellis island after he cut the amount of salt in the diet. Six of the patients were marines who could not sleep, and six were former morphine addicts.

Cooking Meat

Cooking with moist heat tends to make tough meats tender. The moisture may be applied in the form of water, vegetable or fruit juice, or milk. Dry heat is best for tender cuts. This means that no moisture is added, the meat is neither covered nor basted. Low to moderate steady heat is best for cooking all meats, all cuts, by all methods. It makes for evenness of cooking, tenderness, preserves flavor and prevents waste in shrinkage.
